

Emerging Leaders Seminar Global Organizations and Management

Advance your leadership skills, build your network, and prepare for leadership roles by participating in a three-day intensive introduction to global business.

Join a cohort of talented young professionals from underrepresented ethnic backgrounds, with diverse professional experience and aspirations, who will gather at the Yale School of Management this spring to gain new skills and enhance their careers within global organizations. The Emerging Leaders Seminar: Global Organizations and Management is designed to foster the careers of promising professionals of color by providing an understanding of the increasingly global challenges faced by organizations in a variety of sectors.

As a participant in the Emerging Leaders Seminar, you will learn from top Yale SOM faculty, getting an understanding of management tools and how they can help address challenges in any sector. You will also interact with current students and alumni and learn about the value of management education and the diversity of career options possible with a graduate management degree. The program also provides participants with professional development coaching and opportunities to engage with other high-potential professionals of color.

You will leave the program with connections to a larger professional network, new ways of thinking about global challenges, and business skills and insights that you can immediately apply within your organization.

Details

May 11–14, 2017

Visit som.yale.edu/els for more details

Investment

- Tuition, cost of lodging (in a double occupancy room), and meals during the program are covered by the Yale School of Management.
- Participants will receive a reimbursement of up to $500 toward transportation costs to and from Yale's campus in New Haven, Connecticut.

Venue

Yale School of Management
Edward P. Evans Hall
New Haven, Connecticut

Contact

Program Manager Nataly Robalino
SOMEmergingLeaders@yale.edu

Yale SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT

Agenda

Welcome to Yale

- Dean Edward A. Snyder discusses the school's distinctive global approach
- Meet your fellow participants and your program guides

Understanding the Global Landscape

- Global economic development
- Economics of global organizations

Strategies for Global Challenges

- Non-market strategies
- Public-private policy partnerships

Global Leadership Development

- Ethical Leadership
- Interpersonal Leadership Development

Immediate Impact

Enhance your global acumen

Learn more about executive-level challenges and strategies within a global context

Elevate your leadership skills

Learn more about your interpersonal style and how to adapt to be effective within your current team or company

Expand your knowledge of management tools

Learn more about graduate-level business frameworks and tools and how they can help you reach your professional goals.

Extend your professional network

Build connections with emerging leaders of color across the United States and the world.

Who should attend

Are you looking to accelerate your career progress within a global company? Do you plan to have impact on organizations outside of the United States? Are you looking to learn more about how organizations around the world work?

This immersion program is created for early career professionals (two years or less of full-time work experience) interested in senior management careers in global businesses, governments, and nonprofits. We are looking for talented professionals who come from backgrounds underrepresented in management (including, but not limited to, Black, Latino/Hispanic American, Native American, Native Hawaiian, African, Central/South American and Southeast Asian ethnicities) and have not yet pursued graduate education.

Application Requirements

Application opens March 1

- Applicants must be available to attend the entire seminar.
- Statement of interest
- One-page application
- Undergraduate transcript (unofficial)
- Professional nomination statement
To be completed by a management-level member of your organization, this statement provides the Admissions Committee with a better understanding of your role and potential as a leader.
- Deadline March 31, 2017