Note on Treasury contributions to Federal Reserve Programs

The Treasury announced on April 9 that it intended to use funds available under the CARES Act to purchase equity in special purpose vehicles established under Fed lending programs. On June 16, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York received the most recent contribution of $10 billion to TALF. In total, the Treasury has invested a total of $114 billion in six facilities. Per the facility agreements, 85% of the equity contributions to the CCF, CPFF, MLF, MSF and TALF have been invested in nonmarketable Treasury securities; $31.9 billion for the CCF, $8.5 billion for the CPFF, $14.9 billion for the MLF, $31.9 billion for the MSF, and $8.5 billion for TALF.

As of July 2, there is $215 billion outstanding across 10 facilities (Figure 1); $114 billion out of the total has been used to purchase targeted assets. Figure 1a below reports the outstanding amount of each facility, not including Treasury contributions that are invested in securities, from June 18 onwards.

Note on Federal Reserve Swap lines

Over the last two weeks, central banks significantly reduced their use of the USD swap lines established with the Fed in March. The reduction is due to the expiration of a series of 84-day swaps those central banks entered in March and April. Auctions for these swaps were conducted weekly. As these contracts are reaching maturity, the total outstanding amount declined by over $260 billion since its peak on May 27. As of July 2, the total amount still outstanding is $182 billion, down from $228 billion last week. With $395 million outstanding, the BoE is now among the three smallest counterparties. The ECB remains the second largest counterparty with $19 billion outstanding. At $132 billion outstanding, the BoJ’s share now represents 72 percent of the total.

Liquidity Swap Lines

The USD swap lines are bilateral agreements between the Fed and foreign central banks. They allow foreign central banks to exchange domestic currency for US dollars. The Fed currently maintains swap line agreements with 14 central banks.
